Exhibition overview

The 10th International Congress on Non-Motor Dysfunctions in Parkinson's Disease and Related Disorders (NMDPD 2014) will take place in Nice, France in December 2014. It will look at new developments in the understanding of non motor aspects in Parkinson's disease and related disorders. There will be discussions of brain diseases and how they contribute to cognitive decline. An effort will be made to identify the specific psychological markers, if any, of Parkinson's dementia and of dementia with Lewy bodies, and also the biochemical and genetic factors involved. The identification of cortical Lewy bodies in recent years has contributed to understanding but at the same time raised new and still unanswered questions. The overlap with Alzheimer's disease will be a central issue, as is neurochemical changes seen in these disorders. Delirium, dementia, anxiety and psychosis frequently affect the lives of patients and caregivers even more than motor disturbances, and they therefore deserve special attention. In addition to cognitive impairment, patients with movement disorders frequently complain of disturbances of the autonomic nervous system, REM sleep behaviour disorder and hyposmia. All these aspects will be discussed in detail.
