Exhibition overview

The European Molecular Biology Organisation (EMBO) is an organization of more than 1500 leading researchers that promotes excellence in the life sciences. The major goals of the organization are to support talented researchers at all stages of their careers, stimulate the exchange of scientific information, and help build a European research environment where scientists can achieve their best work.

The Federation of European Biochemical Societies (FEBS) is one of the largest organizations in European life sciences. FEBS seeks to promote, encourage and support biochemistry, molecular cell biology, molecular biophysics and related areas, particularly in Europe and neighbouring regions. It publishes four scientific journals and funds an Annual Congress, Medals and Prizes, Research Fellowships, Advanced Courses, Workshops, Special Meetings and Travel Grants. FEBS also promotes scientific aid to disadvantaged economies, and action on education, women in science, science and society, and research funding.

FEBS, EMBO and the French Society for Biochemistry and Molecular Biology will hold a joint conference for the life sciences in 2014 which will take place in August/September in Paris, France.

The FEBS–EMBO 2014 Conference will bring together many leading researchers to discuss the latest scientific findings in the life sciences. The programme will encompass the entire range of the molecular life sciences. The conference will also celebrate the 50th anniversaries of FEBS and EMBO and the 100th anniversary of the French Society for Biochemistry and Molecular Biology.
