Exhibition overview

The European Society for Paediatric Infectious Diseases (ESPID) forms the basis for European investigators interested in infectious diseases in children and infection prevention in childhood. It exists to promote the exchange of information among people who have special experience in the field of paediatric infectious diseases, and those who have an interest in this area. The society is engaged in a number of activities including the organization of multicentre trials, international exchange of infectious disease fellows and an annual conference.

In 2014, the ESPID Annual Conference will take place in Dublin, Ireland.
