Exhibition overview

The FEMS Congresses are the only scientific meeting at European level providing a unique forum for interdisciplinary dialogue and discussion between all microbiological specialties ranging from basic research to applied and medical microbiology. Furthermore, FEMS Congresses attract a high number of young scientists who are at the beginning of their careers in the expanding field of microbiology.

Exhibition details

Scientific contribution will focus on the most important recent microbiological challenges such as antibiotic resistance, environment pollution, emergence of highly pathogenic pathogens etc., giving all participants an update on these leading arguments.
