Exhibition overview

The ECP is the 14th European Congress of Psychology that is going to be held in Milan on 7-10 July 2015 under the auspices of EFPA (European Federation of Psychologists' Associations). During the event, whose goal is the integration of practice with research, the relators will present new techniques and best practices from all the fields of psychology.

Exhibition details

The European Congress of Psychology is the place to meet European psychologists and learn about advances in theory and research as well as educational and professional development. This XIV Congress has contributors from all over the world and a scientific programme that covers all areas of contemporary psychology.

There is a focus on the societal significance of psychology with many contributions demonstrating how psychology helps to understand, prevent and resolve human problems. Special consideration will be devoted to nutrition, environmental safety and equitable growth among and beyond the traditional topics of psychological research. Psychology in fact should play a unique role in supplying knowledge, promoting the proper attitudes and guiding interventions conducive to a better and more equitable use of natural resources and human potentials to safeguard the entire planet and the rights of future generations.
