Exhibition overview

The French League Against Cancer and the Alliance of African & Mediterranean French Speaking Leagues Against Cancer (ALIAM) will host the 2016 World Cancer Congress. This is the latest in a long and distinguished line of such international conferences to be held in great cities, and we look forward to welcoming more than 3'000 global cancer and health experts in the City of Lights.

Building on the impressive success of the 2014 Congress in Melbourne and its 120 sessions, 350 speakers, 48 exhibitors and 2, 1 billion of opportunities to see, hear and read about the event, our goal is to place the Paris Congress at the forefront of discovery, innovation and development of knowledge for the prevention and treatment of cancer.

The organisers will work with UICC and the Local Host Committee (LHC), including various French, European and African bodies involved in the control of cancer, to further strengthen the global cancer community ability to connect, exchange new ideas and strategies for implementing cancer science, and of course to promote equity in access to cancer care in lower-middle income countries.

The LHC and the Programme Committee are fully committed to design a stimulating and attractive programme
